they have a perfect right, as business men, to make that trip of inspectionthey would not be attending to their legitimate duties if they neglected it;but we are unable to see why Joseph F. Smith, in taking that business say worldwide-reputation, for the junket, is "living his religion" as he splendid manner in which he has conpretends to do. Joseph F., of course, as we understand, pretends to be a prophet. As such he assumes to be the highest religious exemplar in all Christendom. It is said of the Savior that He cast the money changers out of the temple because of their desceration of that holy edifice through their active greed for shekels. Yet here goes Joseph F. hiking off on a jolly money-making trip that sets at defiance the teachings and the acts of the Savior of mankind, whom he pretends to most perfectly emulate and represent. Not for Joseph F. the laying on hands for the healing of the sick Better, he thinks, it is for him to add

Among his people are some starving ones—widows and orphans who appeal to the public for charity bewho appeal to the public for charity because the Smiths eat up the substance contributed supposedly for their support—but Jeseph F. would not for a moment bless the leaves and fishes in order that the bellies of those ahungered might be filled. And it is all because Joseph F. has a peculiar way of "living his religion."

Wedding Day of Marie Antoinette.

Today, May 16, 1770, at Vernailles, Marie Antoinette was married to the Dauphin of France, who later became Louis XVI. Versailles and never looked as lovely, no similar ceremony in France was ever attended with more elaborate preparations, and no sinfilar ceremony in the world was ever accompanied with more uncommon spicinior. But immediately after the ceremony a thunder storm of unparallesed violence broke over the palace of Versailles, darkening the surrounding scenery, and striking letter into the hearts of the people for miles around it was looked upon as an ill omen by the accomplished and heautiful queen and her friends.

This incident, however, did not deter Wedding Day of Marie Antoinette.

This incident, however, did not deter ranged. On May 50 the festivities at raris were saudened by a most terri-ble accident; a number of citizens being crushed to death in the Rue Royale by enies of the clurren to complain, or some mismanagement on the part of the rather to confess, that the matter has proper authorities.
